PROTECTION OF THE THEOTOSIS
October 1, 2026

The feast of the Protection of the Theotokos, also known as the Intercession of the Mother of God, commemorates a miraculous event in the 10th century at the Church of Blachernae in Constantinople. During a vigil, Saint Andrew of Constantinople witnessed the Virgin Mary appearing in the air, radiant and surrounded by angels and saints. She knelt in prayer and then spread her veil over the gathered faithful, symbolizing her protection and intercession for all Christians, particularly during times of danger or siege

The feast is celebrated on October 1 in the Julian calendar (October 14 in the Gregorian calendar) in Eastern Orthodox and Byzantine Catholic Churches. It is especially significant in Slavic Orthodox traditions, including Russia, Belarus, and Ukraine, where it is considered one of the most important solemnities after the Twelve Great Feasts and Pascha . In Ukraine, the feast has historical connections to the spirituality of the Cossacks and is associated with national and family observances .
